

Loving

Loving is a film directed by Jeff Nichols. This film is very recent because he has been realised on november 2016.

This feature a true lovestory between a white man called Richard Loving, a builder, and his wife, a black woman called Mildred Jeter. This story takes place in the 50's, that's to say during the segregation in the USA.

However, something separates them : their colour of skin.

They want to marry but they live in the state of Virginia and they are not allowed to get married because the interracial marriage is illegal. Together, they went to Washington where it is legal. They risk to be separated each second that goes by.

They return in Virginia but they are arrested in the middle of the night by the police. Then a long epic fight against segregation begin.

The Lovings are charged of one year in prison or twenty five years to go into exile, out of Virginia.

They're going to fight during nine years, to make their marriage recognized. Mildred, housewife, struggled a lot with the help of the lawyer. She was brave. She wrote a letter to Mr.Bobby Kennedy. In 1967, at the supreme court, the conflict stop forbidding mixt marriage.

But her life without a break won't stop. She will live a misfortune : the death of her husband. Thanks to them, the law has changed in this part of the united states, which the permission of the civil unions between Blacks and Whites !

In my view, the lovings are heroes. Mildred just wanted to defend her rights.

I find this mythic couple fabulous.

They allowed to change the constitution in the USA. For me, Richard and Mildred are equally important than Martin Luther King. This film is moving but he's long.

A lot of scenes are not represented ; as the important scenes of justice and victory.

Moreover, this scene has few speeches, despite splendid landscapes.
